CARLETON UNIVERSITY

OTTAWA 1, CANADA

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT AND VICE-CHANCELLOR

March 1969

1968-69 was a lively year in terms of questions, re-evaluation, and, I hope, some answers. The transition to New University Government was made by February and we all look forward to the results of greater participation by all segments of the University community.

The Commission on Undergraduate Teaching and Learning in the Faculty of Arts announced terms of reference in the fall and continued to hold hearings during the year. The responses from students on the Rideau River Campus and at St. Patrick's College have been encouraging. At the student workshop held in the spring, students, faculty, and administrators alike tried to better understand and remedy some of the most pressing problems universities face today: the student loan program; the university as recipient of funds; student summer employment; and where the university is and where it's going. The sessions proved provocative for those who attended.

As we end the second year of the St. Patrick's College-Carleton University merger, we can be proud of the sound relationship that continues. In December, the University Senate approved a resolution outlining the future role of St. Patrick's College division - somewhat different from the Rideau River Campus, with emphasis on course experimentation in the liberal arts. We feel strongly that this particular role will certainly be to the advantage of the larger Carleton which cannot lend itself so easily to experimental development.

I hope that your years at Carleton have been stimulating, that some expectations have been realized. I know that many aspects of university can be disillusioning, the lack of contact between faculty and student, the uncertainties about automation, the computer, and the mechanization and impersonalization of society. It is my hope that the healthy introspection which has begun at Carleton will continue, and that it will continue in an atmosphere of open dialogue and discussion. The University must continue to be dynamic in its thinking in order to avoid the acceleration of already heightened tensions on so many campuses.

I extend warm wishes to the graduands, and invite you to return often to Carleton. As you effectively use the knowledge and abilities you have acquired at Carleton, we are most anxious to hear of your accomplishments.

A. D. Dunton
President

CARLETON UNIVERSITY FACULTY OF ARTS

ST. PATRICK'S COLLEGE
OFFICE OF THE DEAN
281 ECHO DRIVE
OTTAWA 1, ONTARIO

As you receive your degree from the President and Vice-Chancellor of Carleton University on May 31st, 1969, you look back on the three or four years that you have spent at St. Patrick's College. You will be asking yourself what you have achieved, what you are taking with you. Have these years unfolded the panorama that you had been led to expect?

I do hope that many of you, that all of you, will look back on these years as happy years, that each of you, in his own way, will have taken a bold and important step forward, that you will have discovered and developed your own special talents. You have acquired some knowledge in those fields of study that attracted you, you have achieved a better understanding of your fellowmen, you possess some appreciation of the thinking and of the finer creations of the human mind, our common inheritance from past centuries.

In the course of years you might have achieved similar results from your own efforts, following another path, while struggling with the realities of the economic world. But, you would have missed the contact with the men and women who devote their lives to teaching and learning, the contact with companions ready to share your worries and problems, your interests and enthusiasms.

Today as in past centuries, the university brings together the old and the new. There are the permanent and undying values, our faith, our ability to hope, to do good, to help our fellowmen, our will to safeguard what is good and beautiful and sacred; at the same time we move forward with new ideas, we find much for our own personal betterment and for the advancement of our country and society.

As you receive your degree, your good friends of College days offer you their congratulations and good wishes. But they do not say farewell; they will follow your interests just as you will continue to watch the development of your Alma Mater.

I hope succeeding generations

They may rest by the sea and

And sing, and eat and drink.

The Carleton Ravens football team had another very successful year, placing fifth in the nation. They had a five and two record over the season which was good enough for a second place finish in their conference; only one game behind Waterloo University. Again this year St. Patrick's College provided some final football talent. On the offence Jeanot Rodrique was a key pass receiver for quarterback Mike Sharp. Mike Landry, with his great speed, had a strong final year at guard. For the second consecutive year Joe MacEachern gave the Raven defense strength up the middle, with his heavy arm working overtime from the tackle position. Another final year man, Paul Fortier, was one of the outstanding defensive halfbacks of the Ravens. A first year man, Rod Steers saw limited action on this year's senior packed team, but appears to have an end spot sewn up for the future.

This has been the second year in which St. Pat's athletes played, not for their own team, but for the Carleton's Ravens; and this year more than ever the old St. Pat's winning spirit was evident on the Carleton squad. The football Ravens had their best year ever and they are no longer looked on as just Carleton's team but ours too since St. Pat's plays such a vital role in their success.

VARSITY BASKETBALL

The mighty basketball Ravens easily won their league and championship — as usual. They then proceeded to the national finals in the Maritimes, where they were beaten by the (draft dodgers) U.S. boys who play on the Maritime team (also as usual).

This year only two players from St. Pat's made the big team. One was long lanky Liston MacLhagga, a great outside shooter who plays forward, and can not only sink long ones but has great height under the boards too. The second St. Pat's man was Pat Byrne who played his final year at guard. While St. Pat's only contributed two men to the top squad, yet basketball remained a popular spectator sport at St. Pat's. After all, everyone loves a champion and the basketball Ravens are true champions.

VARSITY HOCKEY

From the rafters of the new civic centre the cry of Go Ravens Go could be heard every second Saturday and many weekday nights during the winter. And the hockey Ravens did go; they won their league and went to the national finals. Coach Brian Kealy, another ex-St. Pat's man, produced a high scoring team which skated and brawled itself about to the national championship, losing only 10-6 to the mighty double blue of Toronto.

Again St. Pat's athletes played prominent roles on the hockey squad this year. Mike Pontus, Bob Byrnes, Morley Labelle and Howie (Goose) Gosselin provided most of the defense all year long, and were noted for their fierce backchecking. Curly Gordon was a key figure in the Ravens attack. He acted as center and policeman; but also noticeably gave the Ravens some professional poise and finesse. He wasn't the only all-star though; Wes Peters, who played right wing on the Small, Heslop, Peters line, was one of the five top scorers in the league and one of the key reasons for the team's success.

St. Pat's students will long remember this year's Raven hockey team and can be justly proud that so many of the players came from St. Pat's. Besides, one must remember that before St. Pat's athletes played for Carleton, they never beat anyone; now they're number one (at least in their league).

FOOTBALL

This was the third year of organized Intramural Sports at St. Pat's, and the program offered was more diversified and better run than ever before. The purpose behind the expanded sports program was to encourage greater participation, and from the number of students that played the various sports, this year was a tremendous success. In fact 1969 marks the fulfillment of a plan which began three years ago when Mr. David Vice first introduced Intramural Sports to the student body of St. Pat's with one sport, namely hockey. This year, largely through the efforts of the Athletic Association President, Steve Defalco, and Vice-President, Bob O'Connell, an imaginative schedule including hockey, football, golf, tennis, basketball, squash, weight training, mixed broomball, broomball, bowling, and curling was offered. That is quite an improvement in just three years!

Of course as Brian Kealy, the Athletic Director stated, "participation is the basis of an Intramural program"; and so it was the students themselves who caused sports to be so popular at St. Pat's this year. Perhaps the main cause of this unbridled interest was the coveted Grand Aggregate trophy which is awarded annually to the class which has accumulated the most award points in football, hockey, basketball, and men's broomball. This year's winners of the inter-class wars was the Senior team, but the intense rivalry which existed during the year will undoubtedly carry over into next year's events.

Perhaps the most indicative single example of the great interest in sports at St. Pat's was the first annual Intramural Banquet which was held at the conclusion of this year. Approximately 150 were in attendance to applaud the teams and individuals being honoured with medals, pins and trophies. The climax of a wonderful year came when Steve Defalco and Bob O'Connell were awarded the Dave Vice trophy; the highest individual honour the Athletic Board of St. Pat's can grant. It can be further noted that these two gentlemen, along with Tina Cairncross, the Women's Athletic Representative, received Merit Awards from Student Council for their work thus showing that sport, and in particular, intramural sports played an integral part in the routine of St. Patrick's College in this year 1968-1969.

ZIEBART RUST PROOFING

As the final pages of the yearbook near completion, the numerous problems which had to be faced during the past year fade into oblivion and we, the yearbook staff, are experiencing joy and excitement. This happiness is twofold; it springs both from the removal of a burden and from the expectation of the finished product. We are also curious as to what people's reaction to the book will be. As with most endeavours, there are many alternatives to publishing a yearbook. Therefore decisions had to be made against a backdrop of varying opinions. Taking all things into consideration, we attempted to produce the best book for this school at this point in time. Where we have failed, we extend sincere apologies; where we have not, we hope that future editions may be able to utilize our ideas and guidelines in order to continually improve the quality of the book.

There are many persons who have shared in the production of this book. Besides the editorial and managerial staff, namely, Pat Higgerty, Louise Montague, Mary Ahearn, John Meraglia, Nancy MacDonald and John Brennan, we wish also to thank several other persons who each, in their own way, made a valuable contribution to the book. These include: Pat McGillis and Clive MacDonald for layouts; Bob Kolbuz, Mike Smith, Mike Tomchack, Emery Ballantyne and Robin Findly for photography; Mike Smith for art work; David Hughes for sports write-ups; Rosalie Schryburt for the picture essay; and Pat Chard and Dave Powers for advertising.

At the completion of this last part of the year 1968-1969, we would like to congratulate the graduates and extend best wishes to the undergraduates for their future years at St. Pat's. It is our desire that this yearbook will aid everyone in recalling the distinctive aspects of the year 1968-1969 at St. Patrick's College.
